COUNTRY'S LARGEST SEAFOOD PRODUCER IS CHESAPEAKE BAY

Annual Report of Fish Commissioner Gives Output of Various Sections.

Chesapeake bay, by reason of its physical and biological characteristics, and its location with respect to the great centers of population, is the largest producer of sea food within the territorial limits of the United States, and is exploited to a degree which requires careful administration for the preservation of its resources, accordng to George M. Bowers, fish coming to George M. Bowers, fish commissioner of the United States.

In his annual report, Commissioner Bowers, says that for these reasons particular attention has been paid to the Chesapeake and its tributaries. He condemned the practice in the upper bay of taking large quantities of food fish for use as fertilizer. "This abuse is especially prevaient in Maryland," he said. The fish being disposed of to vessels from Virginia. In which State the laws against the practice are stringent."

Shad Fry In Potomac.

Eighty-one million shad fry were liberated in the Potomac. With respect to shad in the Potomac, Commissioner

"While there was no apparent ingrams over recent years in the run of shad in the Potomac river, a record was established in the take of shad eggs at the Bryan's Point Station, the collection amounting to 88,727,000, and the yield of fry to 81,000,000 or $2 per cent of the eggs obtained. The nearest approach to this record occurred in 1903, the egg collections of that year numbering 86,370,000, and the output of fry to 65,772,000.

The high decree of success is at-

to 60,772,000.

The high degree of success is attributed to the uniformly favorable weather and water temperatures during the spawning season, which permitted of the capture of a larger percentage of fish with uninjured eggs, and also in improved methods of handling. Though the take of eggs of yellow perch at this station was somewhat curtailed by cold weather at the beginning of the season, the output of fry amounted to over 192,000,000.

Nearly 171,000,000 Liberated.

A total of 176,000,000 shad were liber ated from the fish hawheries of the country, while more than a billion and a half of perch and sunfish liberated.

Millions of cod, pollock, lobster, haddeck, and flat fish were also liberated in dock, and flat fish were also liberated in streams and coastal waters. More than a million black bass, and many million salmon were liberated.

The dyster fisheries of the year were valued at approximately $17,000,000, for $7,255,900 bushels. Of this total the production of the Middle Atlantic States was $2,159,557 bushels, valued at $10.504,457. Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Dejaware, New Jersey, and New York, producing more than half the oyster supply of the entire country.

Lobster fishing in the State of Maine abowed remarkable recuperation during the year, as a result of artificial propagation and protection.

Industry Is Prosperous.

The fishing industries have shown gen eral prosperity and good condition. There are 225,000 persons again in the industry, 7,500 vessels employed, with on investigations looking to the ex'er-mination of the cyster drill and other animals destructive of the growing cysters, that do damage of hundreds of thousands of dollars annually. The oyster industry yields about one-hird of the total income derived from sheries in the United States, and by far the largest percentage of this sum comes from Chesapeake bay fisheries, and those in New York.

The harbor near which Walter Wellman and his companions built their raft was shown, the ruins of the expedition constituting one of the most interesting displays of the evening.

From Spitsbergen the trip southward to Norway was started, and many excellent views of the Norwegian fjords were shown. From time to time, as he threaded his way along the coast, kir. Newman took his travelers inland, showing the industries and characteristics of the country. The pictures concluded with some excellent "movies" of the O'ympic gaines at Stockholm.
